TO BE FITTED

My sympathy goes out to the newly-elected but short-sighted mayor of Santa Barbara, who, by his course of action is wishing more grief upon himself than he will ever be able to absorb.

Some people, as I have often remarked, get some hot lunatic ideas the moment they get into office. The disease, and it is nothing more than that, has no geographical boundaries, but strikes with impartiality in all countries and all climes.

The Santa Barbara executive, who, no doubt, as a private citizen was a comparatively harmless individual, has become imbued with some Mussolini ideas, which he is proceeding to put into force and effect.

As a natural and logical result, he has the newspapers and his official family arrayed against him, and if any official can beat that combination in this country, I have yet to see the color of his hair and eyes.

Contra Costa SERA Workers In Low Pay Bracket

Alameda To Profit By Orders

Richmond skilled, unskilled, "intermediate" and professional and technical SERA workers yesterday were informed by SERA officials that Contra Costa county relief "clients" have been placed in the next to the lowest pay bracket under a new set-up announced by F. Y. McLaughlin, State SERA director.

Under the new schedule which was announced from San Francisco yesterday, SERA workers in El Cerrito and Richmond will receive less pay than SERA employees who reside just a few feet across the county line in Alameda county. Relief "clients" living in the latter county will receive from $11 to $25 per month more than relief workers in this county.

WAGES COMPARED
Here is a comparison of the new rates of pay for months:

Unskilled workers: $44 per month in Contra Costa county; $55 in Alameda county.
Intermediate workers: $50 per month in Contra Costa county; $65 in Alameda county.
Skilled workers: $63 in Contra Costa county; $85 in Alameda county.
Professional and technical workers: $69 in Contra Costa county; $91 in Alameda county.

TACOMA, Wash., July 9—UP—John Philip Weyerhaeuser, wealthy lumberman, told the story of his son's kidnapping on the witness stand today, laying the foundation for the government's attempt to prove that Margaret Thulin Waley, 19, was an active participant in the abduction.

WAR ISSUE IS NOW UP TO LEAGUE

SCHIEVENINGEN, Netherlands, July 9—UP—The Italo-Ethiopian commission of conciliation broke up in an exchange of harsh words tonight, throwing the war threat back to the League of Nations council and definitely endangering Italian membership in the League.

They said he insisted on discussing frontier problems in order to deadlock the conference, knowing Italy had produced important documents making it certain Ethiopia would lose her case.

Breakdown of the conference meant its death. Time for its conciliation efforts was limited to July 25. After then the dispute must be submitted to arbitration. And such a move by the League council, it was feared, would force Italy's resignation.

LIE IS HURLED AT OPENING OF LOBBY PROBES

WASHINGTON, July 9.—UP.—Three angry words—"you're a liar"—flung by R. representative Ralph Brewster, Republican, Maine, at Thomas Corcoran, ace new deal brain truster, threw the opening hearing into lobbying on utilities bills into confusion today.

At the same time a storm burst in the Senate over a motion to send to conference the Wheeler-Rayburn utilities bill, which provoked the house inquiry. It was precipitated by a motion from Senator William Dieterich, Democrat, Illinois, to instruct the Senate conferees not to insist upon the so-called "death sentence" for "unnecessary" utility holding companies, which the house rejected. A vote on Dieterich's motion is expected tomorrow.

The lie was passed in the house rules committee as Corcoran was concluding a reply to charges by Brewster that he sought to influence the Maine representative's vote on the "death sentence" by threatening to stop work on the Pascataquoddy dam project in Brewster's district.

Corcoran told how Brewster had attended conferences of proponents of the "death sentence" clause and said he had promised to make a speech on the floor of the House in favor of it.

Later, after a visit to Maine, Corcoran said, Brewster changed his mind and informed Corcoran he could not vote for the drastic provision.

"Mr. Brewster offered to duck the vote and go back to his hotel," Corcoran began.

A few feet away, sitting at a table among newspaper correspondents, Brewster leaned forward in his chair, his face flushed.

"You're a liar!" he roared. Chairman John J. O'Connor, Democrat, New York, of the rules committee pounded for order. Members of the committee whispered excitedly. Spectators gasped. O'Connor glared at Brewster and cautioned him against such interruptions. The Maine congressman waved his hand in acknowledgement of the rebuke.

Corcoran flung a disgusted look at Brewster and finished his statement. A few moments later O'Connor adjourned the hearings until 10 A. M. tomorrow when Dr. Ernest Gruening, director of insular affairs, former editor of the Nation and former Maine newspaper publisher, is expected to be called.

In the room when Corcoran concluded his testimony were Gruening and several members of the so-called "brain trust" including Ben Cohen, co-author of the Wheeler-Rayburn utilities bill.

George Yurko threatens to become a violin soloist for the club, but asked for an extension of time in which to let his hair grow so that he would look more like a professional. This was granted, although it was felt that he should be more particular about how his sounds than how he looks.

S. S. Hudson was chairman of the day Monday, the meeting being turned over to him by the President Forrest Wright.

HEARINGS SET ON DOG AND OTHER BILLS

SACRAMENTO, July 9.—UP.—More than 700 bills passed by the last session of the legislature still are before Governor Frank P. Merriam, awaiting his signature.

Indications were that a large number would die by pocket veto, inasmuch as all bills must have been signed by midnight, July 20, or they are automatically vetoed.

A series of hearings were planned on controversial measures still before the governor.

Wednesday opposing forces will present arguments on bills relating to tideland oil drilling at Huntington Beach, agricultural proration and fair trade practices.

A Senate oil investigating committee already is delving into the Huntington Beach issue. Arlin F. Stockburger, State finance director, told the committee today that settlement made with independent oil companies tapping the State-owned pool at Huntington Beach was fair and equitable.

Stockburger reported that a settlement with Standard Oil still was pending, but he believed that it would be made on the same basis as the others. The first agreement was made shortly after Stockburger succeeded Rolland Vandegrift.

Later this week hearings are to be conducted on the chain store tax bill, a dog racing bill, and repeal of the alternate highway bids act. Still before the governor also is a measure repealing the California "gin marriage" law.

Governor Merriam announced he would remain in his office during the bill-signing period.

Old Custom To Be Broken With Hanging Today

FOLSOM PRISON, July 9.—UP.—For the first time in the history of Folsom Prison a convicted man will be hanged on other than a Friday when Harry Garcia tomorrow pays the supreme penalty for the fatal stabbing of two fellow convicts.

Governor Frank P. Merriam's office announced that commutation of the death sentence against Garcia would not be recommended, and Governor Merriam previously indicated he would not interfere with the hanging.

Garcia, a prison "bad boy," was convicted of killing Juan Garcia and Stanley C. Price, Los Angeles convicts, as they stood in the prison yard with other inmates listening to a radio broadcast of a world series baseball game Oct. 7, 1933. The state supreme court denied his appeal.

Superior Judge Day M. Lemon of Sacramento set Wednesday, July 10 as date for Garcia's hanging. He commented later that he felt the Friday hanging "true" at the prison to be ridiculous, and said he had given no heed to the day involved when he set date for the execution.

ENOCH ARDEN FINDS HE IS NOT WELCOME

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—UP.—Clyde Mitchell, 37, released after police had ended his nine-year flight from justice, planned to return to his work as a male nurse and choros boy today.

RELEASED BY POLICE. Mitchell was arrested yesterday as a fugitive from St. Louis, Mo., where he reportedly jumped a $10,000 bail bond on a robbery charge in 1926. Police also questioned him regarding the killing of Joseph Mogier, who furnished the bond.

Local authorities released him after St. Louis police advised there were no witnesses available against him.

WIFE IN DILEMMA

His decision to return to Jail, son, Mitch, and attempt to obtain employment as a male nurse ended a dilemma which had confronted his former wife.

Divorced from Mitchell, who married Clarence French of Los Angeles. A divorce from him was become final within a few days and she planned marriage with George Hampton, a San Francisco bookbinder.

When Mitchell suddenly appeared in San Francisco her marriage plans went awry. Mitchell urged her to return to him. As St. Hampton and Mitchell discussed the situation police came and arrested Mitchell.

LOVES OTHER MAN

"It know that it is George Hampton I love," Mrs. Mitchell said tonight. Mitchell said he had been employed as a male nurse and choros boy. He planned a stop Reno, Nev., on his way east.

Hollywood Film Shop

HOLLYWOOD, July 9.—UP—The boys and girls who wonder why they have to study geography should meet Fred W. Harris. He'll tell them how important it is. To a motion picture location expert, particularly.

Such experts have to know as much about geography as a Hollywood blonde knows about peroxide. They're called on daily to supply anything from a Swedish tundra to a pint-sized glacier. Furthermore, it has to be a good carbon copy and (almost always) it has to be close to Hollywood.

Harris is that kind of a geographer. His job at Paramount is to choose the spot when a company can shoot its outdoor scenes. Some pictures are easy to place on location. When he hears it's an airplane story, Harris gets a full night's sleep because all that picture will need is a lot of sky. But when it's some picture like "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," his worries start.

For "The Lancers" Harris had to set up a background conforming to the Khyber Pass in India. After he over his geography books, he learned that the Pass was a granite fault and Eocene sandstone. He scouted around and found just such a spot within 35 miles of Hollywood. The setting was accurate enough to prompt

FILM FUN IS PROVIDED BY JOE E. BROWN

Joe E. Brown appears at the Fox theater today in "Alibi Ike," the Warner Bros. comedy of a ball player with "bats in his belfry" and feminine curves on his mind.

To make this an outstanding show the Fox has secured the screen's first college murder mystery thriller, "College Scandal," making the incoming bill light and airy Summer entertainment.

Brown, in the title role of "Alibi Ike," is both a crack pitcher and the best batter of his club. He has an alibi for everything—not just for mistakes but for plays any other ball player would have been proud of. Death Valley
Scotty Feared
Lost In Desert

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—UP—Walter Scott—"Death Valley Scotty," mysterious man of the Mojave desert—reportedly was missing tonight, somewhere on the desert, en route from his lonely mansion, 169 miles north of Death Valley Junction, to Los Angeles.

Friends of the strange desert character said he left his desert home two weeks ago and had not been reported since. It was feared he might have been stricken with a heart ailment traveling alone on the desert.

His business associate, A. M. Johnson of Chicago, and Dr. Frank G. Nolan, a friend, were preparing to launch an airplane search of the desert. Several film colony fliers have volunteered use of their planes.

The DAILY WASHINGTON
MERRY GO ROUND

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Presidential advisers admit, off the record, that the House of Representatives has them worried.

Its recent transition from complete facility to a turbulent defiance is one of the most significant developments of the political years.

When the legislative wheels first began grinding, it was the Senate which was the "Peck's bad boy" of Capitol Hill. It would be far from accurate to say that the Senate has now been roped and hog-tied. But it is a fact that since its early belligerency on the Works Relief Bill, the Senate has worked in fairly close harmony with the White House.

All of the major "must" measures—holding company, Wagner labor disputes, social security, NRA and TVA—emerged from the Senate in forms satisfactory to the President. But the House, which started as a lamb, is now a raging lion. After riddling the Holding Company Bill, it is threatening to perform the same operation on the TVA amendments.

REASONS

This development probably is due to two factors:

FIRST, more than a fourth of the members are new-comers who won their seats chiefly as a result of the overwhelming New Deal landslide. A large proportion of these first-termers are "political accidents" who will disappear in next year's balloting. And they know it. Obviously they can afford to be indifferent to campaign pledges and party loyalty. In other words, figuring that they have only a limited tenure of office, the boys are out to make the most of it—for themselves.

SECOND, Democratic floor leadership is the weakest and secretly most hostile to the Administration in recent congressional history.

THIRD-RATERS
It is an extraordinary fact, but not one of the top-rung Democratic herd-riders is a strong figure. Speaker Joe Byrnes, Acting Floor Leader John Taylor, Chairman John O'Connor of the Rules Committee, and Whip Pat Boland, all are third-raters.

They owe their party eminence to two things only—seniority plus the President's failure last December to back able candidates for their posts.

Had he thrown his support to the latter—as he was urged to do—it is likely that a far different situation would exist in the House today. With hard-hitting leaders wholeheartedly supporting instead of covertly sabotaging him behind the scenes, Roosevelt probably could have won his major fights, including the "death sentence" clause in the Holding Company Bill.

NEW YORK
INSIDE OUT
By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, July 9.—If the excitement over the murder of Howard Hughes, nephew of Chief Justice Hughes, little attention has been paid to Tom and Elsie Yawkey, in whose interests the slain lawyer made the fatal trip to Detroit.

The Yawkeys are two of New York's most glamorous figures. They live in a Fifth Avenue penthouse, hunt his game in Alaska and own a romantic plantation on a picturesque rice island off the Georgia coast. The Yawkey fortune comes from Tom's uncle, who was a fabulously rich lumberman, and from Margaret Yawkey, whose collection of marine paintings was one of the finest in the country.

Tom Yawkey is handsome and rich enough to be a Broadway playboy, but shrewd enough to run the Boston Red Sox successfully. He bought the baseball team a few years ago as a hobby; his regular interests are in the lumber business he inherited. Elsie Yawkey is beautiful enough to rate the lead in a Ziegfeld show, but vicious enough to hunt bears in Alaska, which is one of her favorite recreations. Invitations to their Christmas parties on the remote little Georgia island are eagerly sought after by local society members.

The Dickinson case will cast a shadow over future celebrations.

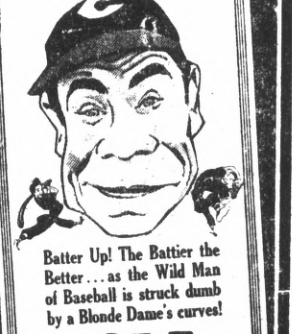

GOOFY—A simple and sometimes lustrous avenue, Broadway adopts new heroes and heroines for notoriously odd reasons and sometimes for no reason at all. The latest gadget to capture popular fancy is a gent named Sasassafas, who plays a comic scene in the current Earl Carroll's "Sketchbook."

Sasassafas plays the dumb "Mr. Bayonne," parent of quintuplets, and he gets his laughs by answering all questions with a long, strange sound that might be described in print as "OOOHHH YEEAAH." It's a nutty gag that sounds foolish—and is foolish—but it gets the howls.

Bomb Plot Case

MODESTO, July 9.—EP—Trial of eight men charged with a plot to dynamite Standard Oil property in a state-wide demonstration connected with coast oil tankship strike opened before Superior Judge Roy B. Maxey today.

Selection of jurors dragged thru-out the day, with indications that a week might be required to obtain a full jury.

John Rogers, one of the defendants, attended the opening court session in a wheel chair. He has been confined to the county hospital by a serious illness. Another defendant, Alphouse Taylor, remained in the hospital, still too ill to be brought into court.

Eleven men originally were indicted in the purported plot. Harry Marchant, one of the number, was released to Portland, Ore. authorities. James Scudler was released on his own recognizance to become a State witness.

TWO-TIME LOVE

Nelly Graf

Virginia Bret, private secretary in a small-town bank is in love with her boss's son, Bruce Tregg, and believes that he is in love with her, but she is disturbed when Celeste Dell, whom Bruce knew in college, comes to visit his sister Polly and assumes a possessive manner toward him.

Bruce finally asks Virginia to marry him but, soon afterward, he drives Celeste to Denver to catch a train and fails to return. Virginia is stunned when she learns that they have been married. On top of this, comes the news that her sister Lavinne has lost her job. The responsibility of taking care of their invalid mother now falls entirely on Virginia.

CHAPTER XVI
GLADYS and Lavinne helped Virginia into the cab, then climbed in after her.

"The whole truth Lavinne," Gladys blurted as soon as they were seated, "is that Virginia was too good for Bruce. Now we've got to make her realize it!"

But Virginia wasn't listening. She had slumped down and was staring straight ahead. Lavinne was fired. That meant she'd have to keep her job at the bank. It wasn't so easy to get another. And her mother must not be deprived of the things she needed.

The taxi carried them swiftly home. Gladys insisted upon paying the fare and then accompanied the two sisters into the house.

"My but it's quiet in here," Virginia spoke in a strained voice. "I guess Mother isn't home."

"I guess not," Lavinne agreed and then went toward her mother's bedroom. She opened the door. "It's strange she didn't say anything."

The last word was a hysterical shriek. It brought Virginia and Gladys to Lavinne's side to see the unconscious figure of Mrs. Bret slumped in a big chair by her window.

Virginia reached her first and took a newspaper from her hand—a newspaper with the headline "Banker's Son Elopes."

The girls carried her to the bed got stimulants, summoned the doctor.

"SHE must have had quite a shock," the doctor commented. "Did she receive bad news or anything like that?"

Virginia's heart was ice. She thought of that newspaper headline. She thought of how she and Bruce stood before her mother on Sunday and had told her their plans. How much her mother desired her daughters' happiness! Oh, if anything happened to her mother, she'd hate Bruce. She'd hate him!

Gladys came back from summoning Janice Nales, found Virginia in hysterics. It was Janice who finally quieted her, holding her in her arms like a child and crooning.

There, there, lambie. Just cry on Auntie Janice's shoulder. Tears wash away trouble—even the worst of trouble.

The doctor finally left, with the instructions: "Keep Mrs. Bret as quiet as possible. I can't tell what the outcome will be for a few days."

MRS. SANFORD SPEAKS
The subject of Mrs. Sanford's address was "The Constant Change in Life," and she spoke in part as follows:

"Earliest recordings concerning the origin of our planet go back to about three billion years ago. Plant life supposedly commenced some 225,000,000 years since. There were strange forms of plant life and animal life in those days, the first life being in the ocean.

"Reptiles were not considered as lowly as today and some of them possessed fangs. Some species of birds had teeth. Horses were as small as dogs. The processes of evolution have brought about our plant and animal kingdoms as we know them today. This well illustrates the well-known phrase: 'There is nothing permanent but change.'

CONSTANT CHANGE

"Our planetary system is constantly in the process of change, being steadily on the move, like a flock of birds. What appears to be a small twinkling star is a fiery planet surrounded by flames, which form a sort of a halo around it. Small portions of stars are eventually thrown off, which eventually join forces with other portions, creating other stars which have been named by astronomers.

"The only outstanding woman astronomer was Henrietta Leavitt, who was born in Lancaster, Mass., in 1868, and received great distinction for her discoveries and experiments at Harvard College Observatory, where she became a permanent member of the staff of 1902. "Scientists are now debating the question concerning the possibility that seeds of rare plant life may be brought here by meteors from other planets.

CHANGES TOLD

"Today, consciously and unconsciously, we are seeing through the eyes of hundreds of scientists who have gone on and left their discoveries and wonders for us to enjoy. And more often than not, these marvelous discoveries are taken for granted.

"There are miraculous changes in transportation and communication; in invention and social systems. Early forms of communication included the torch and flag signals, superseded by the complicated system of telegraphy, radio and airplane. In early periods, it took months to communicate by horseback or boat and now messages are instantly flashed from continent to continent; and our transportation includes luxurious ships, like ornate palaces afloat.

"We seem to be living in a different atmosphere, in a different period of intellectual endeavor and artistic effort."

Mrs. Ione Booth presided at the meeting.

Grant's widow identified Berryman as a stranger seen with her husband at a time before his body was found.

Berryman insisted that he was innocent of any connection with the killing.

ANTI-FAT DRUG IS BLAMED FOR BLIND ATTACKS

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—UP—Living in a moonstone by day, a black opal by night—thus blindness closes down on cataract sufferers.

Mrs. Marie Von Harman Lindquist tonight told doctors checking dinitrophenol, fat-reducing drug, as the possible cause of her loss of sight.

Mrs. Lindquist was one of 12 San Francisco bay region women who reportedly became blind as cataracts developed on her eyes after they had taken dinitrophenol in attempts to reduce.

Doctors at Stanford University medical school were investigating possible connection between the cataract growths and use of the anti-fat preparation, which literally burns away excess fat by greatly increasing the normal rate of metabolism.

To date no experimental evidence had been obtained to substantiate any such "untoward" results from use of the drug, it was said. At the same time Stanford announced that "it was not advising clinical use of the drug for the present," and the American Medical Association banned dinitrophenol from its list of preparations in good medical standing.

Many physicians believed the cataract growths resulted from malnutrition and lack of balanced diet.

In February, 1934, Mrs. Lindquist weighed 260 pounds. After taking dinitrophenol for 10 months under a physician's care she lost 60 pounds without dieting.

For three weeks in March she lived on milk and tomato juice.

In mid-June she noticed her vision failing. Cataracts developed with great rapidity over both eyes.

"At the very first, I noticed that when I looked at light I saw nothing. Then the cloudiness began. In the daytime it seems as though I could reach out and touch the walls of the moonstone that enclosed me. But at night it's like being inside a black opal," Mrs. Lindquist said.

"As time passed the thickening increased. I'd all beautiful things and fascinating. I can't say I like to be going blind, but it's an interesting experience. There's no pain."

"The only trouble is the terrible monotony. I like to read, to be active, to walk. Sometimes I feel enraged because there's nothing I can do."

Physicians estimated that 1,000 persons in the United States and 1,000,000 throughout the world have used or are using preparations containing dinitrophenol.

Probing Around Unused Buildings Invites Severe Insect Bites

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

THE TIME is here when we develop a specific sort of seasonal "itch." We dig not only at ourselves, but at our houses and barns, our lamps, flower beds, and gardens. We go out into the fields and woods for picnics, to see the blossoms, and to gather leaf mold and various other things.

This brings us into contact with all sorts of living things, bees, insects, and snakes that have not been active during the winter.

A certain percent of these lower forms of animal life possess a poison in their bites and stings, and some of them exude a substance from their bodies that is very irritating to our skin.

Bees and bee stings are not very serious, when only one or two of them get at us, but a large number of them may cause very serious consequences, not only from the swelling and itching near the sting, but often there follows severe vomiting and fever with headache and general pain.

Most insects do not bite or sting us unless we disturb them or their nests, but when we turn over a rotten log and stir up a bunch of bumble bees or a bed of large black ants we are likely to be punished for our intrusion with very irritating bites and stings. If it happens to be a nest of hornets and wasps, the results are still more serious.

The Spider Dread

Then we may interrupt some spiders at their work. Very few spiders bite and very few are poisonous, but I do not believe any small insect is so disliked or dreaded by people in general as the spider. The spider is a hard worker, he spins his web everywhere. He destroys many flies and other bothersome insects, not only by devouring them into his web, from which they cannot escape, but he also kills them by strangling. Naturalists tell us that the sting is not poisonous, but it kills the fly and it is hard to convince the average human being that the bite is not poisonous.

There is one spider which is very common in the south and west, and is occasionally found in all sections, whose bite is so poisonous that its description is worth considering. It is called the black widow, Lactrodectus mactans.

The tarantulas and trap-door spiders have caused poisoning, but are not common. The black widow is a small, black, shiny spider, usually brilliantly marked with either red or yellow or both. The female, which possesses the poisonous bite, is often a half inch long and can spread its black shiny legs over as much as two inches of space. There is a bright red patch on the under side of the abdomen, shaped like an hour glass. The abdomen is large and looks like a black shoe button. There may be more red spots scattered over the middle of the back. The male is much smaller than the female, and is more inconspicuously marked, having about four bright red stripes on each side of the abdomen as well as the hour glass figure underneath.

Eats Her Mate

The black widow, so named because of her habit of eating her mate, is usually found in dark places, in stables, out houses, basements, attics, old stumps, or wherever it can find a dark and hidden corner. It spins a coarse dark web irregular in design, weaving back and forth without any of the lace like design of other spiders' webs.

It is vicious and will attack any other spider or small insect near it, or even you, if you come close to its den. The symptoms of poisoning are very distinct, for within a few minutes after being bitten, extremely severe pains begin in the abdomen and legs, and extend to all the large muscles of the body.

The rigid abdomen shows no local tenderness, but partial paralysis and inability to move may develop. Extreme vomiting, some fever, very slow heart beat, great sweating, and prostration are to be expected. Restlessness and collapse are sometimes followed by death.

The pain and rigidity of the abdomen are so pronounced that when there has been no history of a bite operations for ruptured stomach ulcer or appendix have been performed.

It is well to keep an eye on any creature of the insect variety with which you are not familiar. Children should be taught caution in probing about unused buildings.

Guide to Charm

Yellow-tinted Rouges Best For Summer

By JACQUELINE HUNT

NO DISCUSSION of summer make-up is complete without a few words on those most important items—rouge and lipstick. While you must avoid yellowish powders with a tanned skin or any skin, you will want more yellow in your rouge and lipstick.

If you ordinarily use a conservative lipstick, you may, when vividly tanned, change to a gay, rich shade like vermilion. These rather light shades with your darker skin are very youthful and dashing. A blonde who likes the softer, rosier shades of rouge and lipstick in the winter, may, when her skin becomes tawny under the sun, choose a warm nasturtium rouge and lipstick.

The true brunette or the dark-eyed girl who tans to a rich, warm brown will find the terra cotta and russet shades of rouge and lipstick appealing and yet subtle and natural. These shades seem almost brown in the stick or rouge pot, yet on the skin they are just rosy enough and yet all o enough to harmonize perfectly with a wide range of sun-kissed complexions.

If you are one of those girls who just won't experiment, stick to the clear, true reds and you will get by, even with a well-tanned skin, but you have to watch out for the rouges and lipsticks that lean to the "blue" side of your color chart. Rose-reds and deep reds belong in this classification.

A few more tips on suntanning will be welcome to those of you who are just starting your vacation. First let me remind you that everyone doesn't look well with a tanned skin and that even though you get as brown as a berry and look well that way with your summer sports frocks you will want to bleach as soon as you go back to town or start to school again, and this brings up no end of trouble.

If you think a month or two of golden skin is worth the trouble, however, try not to get a bad burn. It toughens and reddens the skin and sometimes even causes scars. Any kind of oil will help you to tan gradually. Olive oil is good, coconut oil is good for some, and others swear by the pigmented sun-tan oils put out by the cosmetic houses. Use it liberally and be sure that it covers every inch of exposed skin and even beyond the borders.

If you want to enjoy yourself in the sun and yet stay fair you should buy at least three quarts of fresh milk daily and make up the deficiency with evaporated or condensed milk. The latter is appetizing in frozen desserts, custards and creamed dishes.

One large cut of meat a week

Newest Dance of All

And now the "Plocotino"! It's the latest of the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers dances and Hollywood says it is destined to be the new dance sensation. It verges somewhat on the Spanish idea, and is perfectly practical, in modified form, for the ballroom.

Summer Vegetables Help Cut Down the Food Bill

By JUDITH WILSON

SUMMER, with its abundance of inexpensive garden vegetables and fresh fruits, is eagerly welcomed by homemakers who want to find it necessary to reduce the family food budget. It is possible to provide for a family of four or five at a surprisingly low figure right now, in spite of the higher prices for meat and staples.

The fresh vegetables and fruits needed for maintaining health are both plentiful and cheaper than they have been for some time. There are greens of all kinds, new cabbage, white turnips, beets, peas, string beans and even asparagus to be had at bargain prices.

Include as much milk as you can for beverage and cooking purposes. For a family of five you should buy at least three quarts of fresh milk daily and make up the deficiency with evaporated or condensed milk. The latter is appetizing in frozen desserts, custards and creamed dishes.

One large cut of meat a week

DINNERS
Roast Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb with Brown Gravy
Baked Potatoes Mixed Greens
Crisp Custards with Sliced Bananas
Coffee
Liver and Rice Casserole
Bread and Butter
Creamed New Cabbage
Lettuce and Tomato Salad
Prune Roly-Poly
Tea

should be sufficient for the family with a reduced income. It can be served as a roast the first time and sliced and served cold with chili sauce, or made into stews and casserole dishes on subsequent appearances.

Liver Casserole
Dice two slices bacon and cook in a skillet until crisp. Cut a pound of beef liver into one-inch cubes and sprinkle with one-fourth cup flour which has been seasoned with salt and pepper. Add the liver and one and one-half cups partially cooked rice to the fat in the skillet and when browned, remove to a buttered casserole and cover with two cups water, two cups strained canned tomatoes, one teaspoon granulated sugar and two teaspoons salt. Cover closely and bake in a slow oven for one hour. This will make four generous servings.

Maple Custards
For an expensive seeming dessert beat four eggs without separating yolk and white. Blend, stir in one-half cup maple syrup, a pinch of salt and three cups scalded sweet milk or evaporated milk mixed with half water. Strain and pour into buttered baking dishes or individual custard cups. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a slow oven for nearly an hour. Test by inserting a knife blade to the bottom of the dish. Turn out into dessert dishes and serve warm or cold with sliced bananas and light cream.

Western Stew
This is a tasty dish for economy menus. Have one and one-half pounds chuck beef cut into small cubes and fry them until browned on all sides, in a small amount of fat. To the beef add one can tomatoes, three cups water, one onion sliced and salt and pepper to season. Simmer for one hour, then add one and one-half cups macaroni broken into one-inch pieces and two cups fresh or canned whole kernel corn. Simmer for an hour and serve very hot.

Prune Roly-Poly
Make a rich biscuit dough and roll thin. Spread with softened butter and two cups prunes pressed through a sieve, one-half cup sugar and a sprinkling of cinnamon. Roll up like a jelly roll, slice and bake, cut side down in a shallow baking dish. Serve with a sauce made by thickening the prune juice and flavoring with lemon juice.

"Disobedient Daughter" Gets Spanked When Dad Discovers Her Deceit

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

IF THE END justifies the means, then spanking a disobedient child—even though she be twenty—is good medicine. It might, however, be less efficacious in other cases.

"Dear Mrs. Martin: I am twenty and have a nineteen-year-old sister with whom I had a quarrel the other day.

"Our father will not let us stay out after one o'clock, so when we are late we take our shoes off at the front door and walk upstairs in our stocking feet so Dad won't hear us. I have done this many times and Dad has not been the wiser.

"The other evening when I was going out my sister removed the house key from my purse, and when I returned at 3:30 in the morning I could not get in. I had to ring the bell and Dad answered in his bathrobe. He asked me what I meant by coming home at such an hour, and in my confusion I made up an obviously untrue story. Dad took me by the arm, marched me into the living room, where he sat down, laid me over his knee, and spanked me.

Watch the Scene

"The rest of the family, which is comprised of mother, my sister, and two young brothers, came out of their rooms and draped themselves around the furniture and watched Dad spank me. I let the propriety fly to the winds and forgot I was twenty and cried my eyes out.

"My sister mockingly asked me if it hurt. She sat on the arm of the chair and giggled all the time Dad spanked me.

"I have to admit that I will never stay out after one again without Dad's permission, but I think it was mean of my sister to put me in such a position.

"Mrs. Martin, do you think a father is ever justified in spanking his twenty-year-old daughter? Doesn't a girl ever get too old for such punishment?"

"A Disobedient Daughter."

Right and Wrong
Judging from your own reactions to the spanking your father gave you, there is nothing to be said against such a method. But certainly should not be necessary to resort to such measures. A girl of twenty should have intelligence enough to know the difference between right and wrong.

You did a very sneaky, underhanded thing, not once, but many times, and it's understandable enough that your father was outraged to think you would so deceive him. There was no excuse for making a public exhibition of the punishment, however, and I am not greatly impressed by the attitude of your family, especially of your father, who put you "in such a position"—it was your own deceitful self, and you have no one else to blame.

I think you deserve a leather medal plus an orchid for not betraying your sister, who, it seems, was also in the habit of peep-footing in after hours. Sounds to me as though she was peevish with you on this particular occasion, and that her motive was neither altruism or sporting. Since you've learned your lesson, your father has justified his method.

Mrs. Martin will be glad to answer in this column questions of readers interested. Mrs. Martin cannot reply individually to every correspondent. Names will not be published. Address her care of this paper.

Modes and Manners

QUESTION: "The other day I was dining in a restaurant and had not finished one of my courses when the waiter came up and took my plate away. Kindly tell me through Modes and Manners whether it would have been proper if I had asked him to keep my plate so that I could finish my course."—D. J. B.

ANSWER: If you had not finished eating, you certainly had a right to say so to the waiter. He had no business removing the plate unless you appeared to be through. Many persons, on the other hand, have an annoying habit of dawdling. They put down the fork and fold the hands in the lap; then they absently mindedly return to the business of eating again and again. It must be very confusing for a waiter. But, then, when in doubt, a waiter always asks, "May I take your plate?"

White for Rain Is the Note

By IRENE VAIL

New York—The traveler who goes far from home may have occasion to sport a good-looking rainy day ensemble, and if she makes it white from umbrella to rubbers, with swags of white coat between she will be joining the farmers in praying for rain. She may like the swanky cape in place of coat, for both are smart.

There is such a vogue for knitted clothes this summer that it seems superfluous to mention it, excepting that there is always the danger of forgetting the obvious. The three-piece ensemble is best liked in blue and such things, and is to be had in your favorite color, no matter what it is, plus a harmonizing blouse. It's smart just now to make the blouse speak for itself and not just reflect the suit's color and weave. Sheer lingerie blouses are having their day—and making the day for those who appreciate exquisite lingerie and lovely lace detail. Embroidered organdie makes a smart summer choice.

One of the most interesting phases of current fashions is the American adoption of English garden party costume types. Sketched today, at left is a little jacket in double black net with flared peplum trimmed with appliques of silver marguerites. It is worn over a white organdie gown. The black net cap with forward shooting trimming is from Anna Thorpe.

An off-shoulder evening gown with bodice in red net is tucked around the waistline and the separate skirt of gray poul is embroidered in vivid colors around the top of the hips. The new appears again in a light undershirt. Note the kerker adorned of narrow ribbon band and large flower.

THE TAFFETA NOTE

Mary Astor, screen star, prefers bouffant styles for summer. Gingham taffeta with turquoise in dots makes a striking color combination, particularly when the décolletage and flash tulle sash are lined with taffeta of the lighter shade.

POLICE BELIEVE TORCH MURDER THEORY SOUND

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—UP—Leading credence to the "torch murder" theory of the death of Mose Thompson, 78, Mrs. Anna Catcher, a neighbor, today said she had heard screams shortly before she noticed the fire at Thompson's home Monday morning.

Thompson was found dead in his bed when firemen entered the dwelling.

Mrs. Catcher reported that she heard shouts of "get out of here—get away from me," and then the sound of a car driving away.

A few minutes later, she said, she heard the sound of breaking glass and saw smoke pouring from Thompson's window.

An employee of a grocery store where Thompson traded said today that Thompson was expecting company Sunday. A letter from an eastern banking house was found in the room today, indicating a possible source of the check which Thompson is said to have received every three months.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—Supervisor James B. McSheehy will be a candidate for Mayor of San Francisco in the November election against Supervisor Adelphi Uhl, Mayor Angelo Rossi and possibly Supervisor Frank R. Havenner.

Uhl then said practically the same thing. Havenner responded by declaring he was "still watchfully waiting."

Three Men Are Executed For Murder Of Man

CHESTER, Ill., July 9.—UP—Three youthful robber-killers went to their deaths in the electric chair today for slaying a 67-year-old street car motorman last February.

The men, convicted of killing William C. Moss, when he resisted an attempted holdup, were John Krul, 21; Edward Balling, 19, and Van Buren Redmon, 25, all of East St. Louis.

When asked what he wanted for his last meal, Krul, whose wife gave birth to a child after he was sentenced to die, asked for beer with the dinner.

"It's against the prison rules," the warden told him.

Krul ate heartily a sirloin steak. Redmon seemed to relish an order of catfish, but Balling only nibbled at his fried chicken.

near Kanaskut, Wash., to Spokane, to Blanchard and Spirit Lake, Ida., then to Newman Lake," said Hughes.

CHARGED AS BRAINS
It was Margaret Waley who read a notice of the death of John P. Weyerhaeuser, Sr., millionaire grandfather of George, printed in a Spokane newspaper, and it was she who called attention of her husband and Mahan to the item as indicating kidnap possibilities, Hughes charged.

The man whom Weyerhaeuser testified he saw step into an automobile containing the $200,000 ransom was Mahan, Hughes said. This car was owned by F. R. Titcomb, uncle of George, and was driven to the rendezvous by Weyerhaeuser. Later it was abandoned in Seattle. Mrs. Waley drove Mahan's car back to Seattle from the ransom meeting. Hughes charged.

DEFENSE MUM

As Hughes outlined the Federal case and witnesses elaborated on the details, plump Margaret Waley twisted a handkerchief between trembling fingers and stared neither to right nor left.

Red-faced John F. Dore, chief defense counsel and former Seattle mayor, reserved a defense statement until later in the trial, and the parade of government witnesses started.

FATHER ON STAND

H. C. MacDonald, cashier of the First National Bank, Seattle, told of assembling the ransom in old Federal Reserve notes. A typed list of serial numbers taken under his direction was admitted in evidence.

Weyerhaeuser, speaking in a low voice, that was nevertheless audible throughout the tiny courtroom of Federal Judge E. E. Cushman, gave the jury a vivid picture of the agony of uncertainty, the false hopes and the fearful prayers of a family whose son was held captive by unknown persons for eight days.

During the meeting the Italians stubbornly refused to permit Jozo to finish a speech which they insisted was outside the scope of the negotiations. He attempted to say "Al lai, where Italian and Abyssinian troops clashed, is on Ethiopian soil. His remarks, the Italians said, dealt with frontier problems, not actual incidents. So they quit.

It is expected that the material will cost about $3,500. At the same time bids will be opened on gravel and sand for the cement work.

HEARING TO BE HELD

On the motion of Trustee Ira Scott, Helms was instructed to insert in all local and El Cerrito newspapers notice of a public hearing to be held on September 6 at the Fairmont school in El Cerrito on the purchase of a site for a new junior high school to be erected in El Cerrito. It was pointed out that under the state law the board did not have to conduct a hearing on the matter. However, board members felt that such a meeting should be held to give residents of El Cerrito an opportunity to voice their ideas on the selection of the site.

Purchase of a second-hand tractor to be used in the maintenance of the high school grounds was voted. Helms was instructed by the board to purchase the machine.

Construction of an addition to the high school garage to house a new bus authorized by the board was approved by the trustees. Reports were heard on the recent joint meeting of the high school and grammar school boards at which time an additional school nurse was employed.

old days to heed danger signals of an aroused public opinion that put the grog peddlers in the discard. Today there are mutterings which are ominous and betoken drastic regulations, if not abolition. Sensing this and being endowed apparently with more brains than those in the traffic in former days, the distillers, believe it or not, are taking steps to protect their self-interests. Recently the following advertisement, signed by one of the largest distillers in the country, appeared in a large number of newspapers:

"Liquor has no place in the front seat of an automobile. Alcohol and gasoline do not mix. These statements may seem to work directly against our self-interest, but they do not. It is very much to our self-interest to see that the privilege of drinking is not abused. It is to our interest to see that liquor is consumed as it should be consumed. Whiskey is a luxury and should be treated as such. It should be taken in moderation and only in the proper place."

That is one of the best temperance lectures I have read or heard in a long time. Coming from such a source it should carry weight with the fools and nit-wits who get their skins full of booze and foolishly imagine they can drive an auto without endangering the lives of themselves and other people.

FAIR PLAY CODE WILL GO INTO EFFECT TODAY

Eastbay retail trade goes on a Fair Play basis today. Merchants are pledged to maintain fair wages and hours and general working conditions as they were prior to the Supreme Court decision that killed NRA.

Newspapers will carry in merchant advertisements the emblem of the Eastbay Fair Play League. The Alameda Board of Supervisors has officially endorsed the League and recommended that the general public support the League by trading with those merchants that display the emblem.

MOVE IS ENDORSED

The League has the endorsement of more than a dozen retail organizations in Alameda and Contra Costa counties and of the Chamber of Commerce of Oakland and of Berkeley.

Every important local merchant, including the great national chains, has announced that wages and hours will be maintained. The League emblem in their advertisements and in their stores will be sign of their pledge to guide the public in their support of the League's program.

The League is opposed to wage-cutting because it reduces the buying power of the public and sets up a vicious circle that retards recovery and affects every citizen in the community. It opposes destructive price cutting because the practice disrupts retail trade and works an unfair disadvantage upon the merchant of limited capital.

Without support the movement will fail and failure will mean that thousands of people now employed will be added to the roll of unemployed in the Eastbay.
